

Female Anatomy

The Vulva: The female external genitals that include the labia majora and labia minora.

The Mons Veneris: A pad of fat that covers the pubic bone.

The Labia majora: (the large or outer lips) The labia majora start at the thigh and extend inward, surrounding the rest of the vulva. The outer edges are hair covered, the inner edges are smooth.

The labia minora: (the smaller or inner lips) The labia minora are located between the labia majora, meeting at the bottom below the entrance to the vagina, joining at the top with the clitoral hood. The smaller lips are hairless, smooth and irregular. They usually protrude beyond the labia majora and one is naturally larger than the other.
